The name of a Taiwanese woman showed up on TV and in the newspapers almost every day during the first week of May, 2010. She was Chen Shu-chu, a 59-year-old vegetable vendor in a market in Taitung in the east of Taiwan. Forbes Asia picked her as one of the 48 heroes of philanthropy, and Time Magazine also chose her as one of the 100 most influential people in the world.

Chen left school after her mother died and began selling vegetables to help support her family of seven. She worked almost every day from then on. Although she didn’t make much money, she tried to save every dollar and gave away about NT$10 million over the past 10 years. Her money helped build a library at a school and support three children with no parents to live and grow better. She is planning to set up a NT$10 million fund this year to help the poor.

She once told the reporters, “Money is truly useful only when we give it to the people in need most.” In Taiwan, people call her Vegetable Vendor Grandma though she is never married and has no children.
